World Languages & Cultures

Knowledge of other cultures and languages opens doors to a world of possibilities!

This program offers the first two years of study for students preparing to work as translators, interpreters, flight attendants, foreign service employees, or teachers of world languages. It also offers a broad general education for those interested in professions connected with public relations, travel, law, or international businesses.

Why Study World Languages at VU?

Our department provides an excellent environment in which to begin or continue the study of French, German, Japanese, or Spanish. We prepare students to transfer to a four-year institution. Typically our language classes are small, often having 10-12 students. This gives students the opportunity for a lot of interaction with one another and with the instructor. Professors in the World Languages & Cultures

Department care about their students and enjoy leading students and people in the community on educational tours of countries where the languages we teach are spoken. Vincennes University is working hard to attract international students. Our World Language & Cultures majors are often able to meet students from the countries where the languages which they are studying are spoken.

In the Words of a VU Graduate:

"The Spanish courses at VU provided me with a strong learning base that has helped me achieve success working in an international environment. The professors are driven and very approachable. I would recommend these courses to anyone pursuing an international career or foreign service."
